Citizens Warm Up Monday For Main Bout on Plan 13

by Claude Wimberly

An indignant crowd of Greenbelt citizens, variously estimated at between 150 and 200, jammed the Youth Center auditorium Monday night to protest the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission's Area 13 proposal for development of the Greenbelt-College Park area.

The special city council meeting was called by the Mayor for the purpose of hearing the public's comments on an alternate master plan prepared by the City's Advisory Planning Board (APB).

However, it quickly became apparent the Greenbelters were on hand for an entirely different reason.

They represented all sectors of the town, each bent on voicing his or her objections to the scheme. The more vocal bitterly denounced the Area 13 plan, speaking out against what they feel is an encroachment by outsiders on their property, their individual freedoms and way of life.

Others merely affixed their signatures to petitions drawn up in opposition to the MNCPPC proposal. Jim Colby, President of the Greenbelt Junior Chamber of Commerce, reported more than 1,000 signatures were already obtained and more expected. Colby presented the petitions at the public hearing last Tuesday.

One woman vehemently demanded council tell her if there was anything she could do "short of standing in the street with a shotgun" to stop the bulldozers from widening the streets. The irate lady, Mrs. Henley Goode, one of the pioneer residents of Greenbelt was referring to that part of the Area 13 plan which proposes the conversion of major city streets into four-lane arterial highways.

"In an age when we do so much to stress the rights of the individual," Mrs. Goode said heatedly, "I don't see how the feelings of so many residents can be ignored."

Mayor Edgar Smith, replying to Mrs. Goode, told her: "I hope you'll say that at the hearing tomorrow." He assured her the city was "doing everything possible" to oppose the Area 13 plan.

He reminded the audience the city has employed the services of an expert zoning attorney and first-rate professional planner. It will be their task to assist the city's advisory planning board to complete a plan for development of Greenbelt along lines compatible with concepts worked out over the past three years.

In this connection, John Gibson, acting chairman of the APB, made a step-by-step comparison between the city's plan and that proposed by the commission. (See map and

Gibson answered many questions from the floor. Most of them concerned points on which some citizens were unclear as to the impact certain features of the Area 13 plan would have on the community.

After Gibson's presentation, he was warmly congratulated by the city's special attorney Joseph De Paul. An "excellent and succinct report," was the way the lawyer described APB recommendations contained in their interim plan.

Albert K. Herling, a long-time resident active in Greenbelt civic affairs launched a scathing attack on the Area 13 proposal, saying: "If anyone had set out to deliberately destroy the original concept of Greenbelt, they could not have done better than this master plan."

Another speaker, Jim Cassels, offered a number of recommendations. Among them a recommendation that the city acquire a tract of land lying between the firehouse and Pepco substation on Crescent road, with a view to zoning it for construction of a 75-apartment development for senior citizens.

Prior to the 10 p.m. adjournment of the special council meeting, the Mayor thanked the people for turning out in such numbers. "I hope you'll all come to the hearing tomorrow night, and bring your friends," Smith said, adding: "I think you can depend on a pretty good fight."

City Notes

by Ronald M. Dide
City Admin. Aide

Police Chief William Lane began his duties as head of the Department on Wednesday, July 15 after being sworn in by Mayor Edgar L. Smith. After orienting himself in his new position and consulting with his staff officers the Chief hopes to conduct a two week training school program for new officers joining the force shortly.

On Monday, July 20 the General Crew started to drain the swampy area on the north side of the lake as the first step in the lake walkway project. Eventually the City hopes to complete a walkway around the entire Lake as part of the City's parks and pathways program. The crew installed 15" concrete drainage pipe in this first phase of the lake improvement project.

MNCPPC Master Plan Roasted, As Citizens Turn Out En Masse

by G. K. Hodenfield

Greenbelters by the hundreds jammed the Center School auditorium Tuesday night to register their vehement protest against the proposed College Park-Greenbelt Master Plan.

From the opening blast by Mayor Edgar L. Smith, who called the plan "this nightmare," there was no doubt about the sentiments of the crowd which filled the auditorium to overflowing.

A parade of speakers marched to the microphone to denounce the Master Plan, and every denunciation brought stormy applause.

Hot Night

The 10-member Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission felt the heat in more ways than one.

Chairman William J. Stevens several times indicated sympathy with citizen's complaints, particularly in the matter of running four-lane highways through the residential area.

And when George T. Marcou, representing a planning firm hired by Greenbelt, left his seat in the audience to present his case, Stevens told him:

"Leave your coat off—believe me, it's hotter up here than it is out there."

When the audience laughed and applauded, Stevens added, "That's probably the last hand I'll get here tonight."

He was about right, too.

Both Stevens and John S. Hewins, the commissions director of planning, emphasized at the start of the meeting that the plan is only a preliminary one at this stage.

"The full commission has taken no action, and has endorsed no part of it as yet," Stevens said. "A final decision will not be made until all the testimony has been reviewed."

Stevens said the record would be left open for 30 days for admission of any further testimony.

Smith Leads Off

Mayor Smith set the pattern of testimony for the evening when he said the Master Plan "is extremely undesirable, as it fails to provide good planning for the area and is definitely contrary to the best interests of our citizens."

He said the plan "would create a gray belt instead of a green belt," and he urged the commission to reject it, send it back to the technical staff for reconsideration, or hold it in abeyance until Greenbelt's own plan could be presented.

City Councilman Cliff Simonson next told Greenbelt had started to update its own master plan in January, 1962.

"We were happy," he said, "when we heard that MNCPPC was planning a Master Plan. They told us we were 'way ahead,' and asked us to let them catch up, so we could then work as a team."

But when MNCPPC did catch up and go ahead, Simonson said, there was no teamwork. Instead, Greenbelt was invited to Riverdale to see the commission's finished product.

APB's 9 Points

John Gibson, speaking for Greenbelt's Advisory Planning Board, outlined the Greenbelt plan in brief, then ticked off nine emphatic reasons why Greenbelt didn't like the commission's plan.

Among his points:

"The complete destruction of the green belt of trees surrounding the city—the green belt will become a green thread. The only way to have a green belt if Plan 13 (the commission's Master Plan) is adopted would be to paint the apartment roofs green.

"The creation of an irrevocable and overwhelming imbalance of garden and high rise apartments . . . A highway system which runs arterial traffic in four lane highways directly through residential areas . . . Provides no library . . . Inadequate recreation areas . . . Dooms the Greenbelt commercial center to stagnation . . . Failure to provide an elementary school near Boxwood, Lakeside North and Lakewood."

Edward A. Burgoon, speaking for GHI, gave a brief description of Greenbelt history, and said that history "is one of protecting Greenbelt for Greenbelt."

The applause reverberated, as it had for other speakers, when Burgoon added, "We're ready tonight to fight to preserve Greenbelt."

Burgoon said Greenbelt had had only one traffic death in its entire history, and expressed fear that record would soon be shattered if the Master Plan were adopted.

City Controls Roads

At that point, Chairman Stevens of MNCPPC pointed out that the city council has control over the streets and highways within Greenbelt, and told Mayor Smith, "No one but you can widen them. It's all up to you."

Councilman Dave Champion took immediate exception.

"But if your plan presents us with such heavy density," he said, "then we will have to widen them, regardless of our own wishes."

When the applause died down, Stevens acknowledged: "I'm in sympathy with some of the remarks made about the roads. At this point, I see no reason why anyone should panic."

Jim Colby, president of the Greenbelt Junior Chamber of Commerce, told the commission that in just six days the chamber had secured 1,476 signatures on petitions opposing the Master Plan, "a greater number than has ever voted in a city election," and many of the petitions hadn't yet been gathered.

Simon M. Pristoop, president of the Prince Georges Citizen's Planning Association, said the proposed plan was not accompanied by meaningful statistical projections of population.

"Instead," he said, "the population figures submitted by MNCPPC . . . are based primarily upon the proposed plans of the commission, which then appears to use these figures as justification for a strong housing market and the high population density recommended by the technical staff (of MNCPPC)."

"This circular argument must be recognized as such."

Landowners Speak

Also heard were representatives of several large landowners, who have petitioned for rezoning of undeveloped parcels. Attorney T. Hammond Welsh found something undesirable about both the MNCPPC and APB master plans. He criticized the highway plans of the former and took issue with the low-density residential recommendations of the latter.

Welsh then called upon planner Ben Dyer to explain his plans for the development of Parcels 1 and 2, owned in part by Charles Bresler. Dyer said that his plans for townhouses and multiple-family units is the only way that green areas can be maintained because, "Single-family units cannot do this."

Welsh expressed his dislike of suggestions in both master plans for the development of the "Golden Triangle." MNCPPC's idea of a commercial office park he said was impractical since that market was saturated. The APB's proposals for a hospital, junior college, research facility, or estate residences were each ridiculed in turn by Welsh.

Welsh and Dyer said that the most adequate land use for this property was a C-2 zoning which would permit a regional shopping center. Welsh added that Greenbelt needs such a shopping center since the Beltway Plaza has not developed according to expectations.

Several representatives of Springhill Lake brought their complaints to the meeting—most of them centered on the way the Master Plan cuts their area off from the rest of Greenbelt.

The Springhill Lake Citizens Association also opposed commercial zoning for the "Triangle" a "unreliable, unnecessary and unsafe." It also asked that the strip of land opposite the Junior High School not be zoned commercial.

SWIMMING REGISTRATION

To the Editor:

Monday morning I tore myself from the arms of Morpheus, pushed the children through the early ritual of breakfast and dressing, and rushed to the Youth Center in time to take part in that barbarous, but all-time-honored, Greenbelt custom known as registering the kids for swimming lessons.

Having learned my lesson well through experience, I was among the first in line, arriving just before 7:45 a.m. One hour and fifteen minutes later my patience was rewarded by being able to register for the lesson of my child's fancy.

To say that the system for registration is inefficient is putting the case mildly; to state that it is frustrating to the parents and children involved fails to take full cognizance of some of the choice comments I heard while passing my more than one hour in line; to admit it places some of our youth for whom the program is designed in compromising positions is a harsh indictment of the system and those who administer it.

We have determined to put $150,000 into a new pool; a not insignificant amount, even in a municipality in the throes of bristling growth. Will the new pool improve the situation? Will "unofficial" pre-registration (there is no "official" pre-registration) come to a halt? Will there be ample spaces for all Greenbelt children who want to learn to swim? Is the pool which is being planned adequate to the varied needs of the swim team, swimming lessons, and just plain pool fun? Would a new location prove more economical and practical than rebuilding the old pool? All these questions were kicked around during that hour plus, while I waited in line. Perhaps if all Greenbelters are considering these questions, that nerve-racking hour of waiting serves the city a useful, though somewhat obscure, purpose.

THANKS TO RESCUE SQUAD

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, July 15 I was transported as a litter patient from my bed in the Surgery Ward at Mt. Alto Veteran's Hospital to my bedroom at 6-F Ridge Road by a team of young Hunt brothers. They were kind, considerate, courteous and careful all the way. My repeated thanks to them. My hat is off to our local Rescue Squad.

REGRETTABLE

To the Editor:

It is regrettable that the traffic problem that now exists at Greenbelt and Edmonston Road was not envisioned a year ago so that the deplorable and most hazardous situations could have been alleviated.

There seems to be a question as to who has the responsibility to correct this problem—the state of Maryland or the city of Greenbelt. The state claims that the access to and from the Springhill Lake Apartments is by way of a street maintained by the city of Greenbelt, and hence, not the state's responsibility. The city evidently feels that it is not its problem either, for it is taken no positive corrective steps. Will it be necessary for the residents of Springhill Lake to purchase its own traffic light? If so, why then do we pay taxes?

Will it take a fatality at this intersection to get results? I hope not, for death is too Permanent!

Thought for the Week

For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast. — Ephesians 2:8-9

Klem - King

Mr. and Mrs. Justin J. Klem, 4-D Hillside announce the marriage of their daughter Karen Ann to Mr. Donald R. King, son of Mrs. Mary King and the late Edward J. King of 2-R Gardenway on Saturday, the twentieth of June at a Nuptial Mass in St. Hugh's Catholic Church. The Reverend Victor J. Dowgiallow officiated.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her brother Thomas and given in marriage at the foot of the altar by her father. She wore a bell-shaped gown of white organza over taffeta with chapel train. The bodice was a flowered pattern of venise lace medallions which continued on the chapel train and encircled the hem of her dress. Her headpiece was a matching pill box hat with elbow length veil. The bride carried an arm bouquet of white roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Teddy Sue Woolwine of Lanham, Md., and bridesmaids were Mrs. Ann McNally of Berwyn Heights, Md., Miss Dyanna Harris of Bowie, Md., and Miss Ann Canning of College Park, Md.

Best man was Edward King, the groom's brother and ushers were Peter Mitten of Lanham, Robert McNally of Berwyn Heights, Peter Tobolk of Greenbelt, and Robert Klem of Greenbelt. Paul Klem acted as a junior usher.

Ring bearer was Master Michael Klem. The flower girl was Miss Alice Ann Kovalchik.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Antler Room at DeMatha Catholic High School, Hyattsville, Maryland. The Kings will reside at 4-G Hillside, Greenbelt.

Loftus - Hunter

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Loftus announce the marriage of their daughter Judith Therese to Dr. William Gordon Hunter son of Mrs. John J. Hunter of Arlington, Virginia and the late Mr. Hunter. The wedding took place July 18 at St. Hugh's Catholic Church, Greenbelt.

The bride wore a gown of silk feille in empire style with seed pearl trim and her mother's wedding veil of hand-made Alencon lace.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. Ronald G. Boncher, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, matron of honor; Katherine Anne Hunter, Yonkers, New York; Claire Hunter Arlington Virginia and Joan Loftus Greenbelt.

Attending the groom were Robert Hunter, Arlington, Virginia, best man; Richard Morrison, Ansonia, Connecticut, Ramsey Fowler, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and Captain Robert Haymes, USAF, Orlando, Fla.

The bride is a graduate of Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, Purchase, New York, and holds a Masters Degree in Intellectual History from the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Hunter is a graduate of Princeton University, and holds a Masters Degree in Electrical Engineering from the University of Illinois, and Masters and Doctoral Degrees in Statistics from the University of Wisconsin. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

The couple will sail on July 22 aboard the Queen Mary. They will travel through Europe for two months, and then live in England where Dr. Hunter will teach at the Imperial College, University of London.
